

Delivery Health Check

Know what is really slowing delivery - and what to do next

Why do I need this?

Because a program can look active while its most important commitments, risks, decisions, and dependencies remain unclear. The Health Check gives leadership an objective view before delay, rework, and loss of confidence become more expensive.

When motion is not the same as control

Troubled programs are often busy. The problem is fragmented activity: plans do not connect, status is hard to trust, decisions stall, dependencies surface late, and ownership becomes ambiguous.

Signals that a Health Check may be useful

- Leadership cannot get a reliable program status within minutes.
- Milestones move repeatedly, but there is no shared explanation or recovery path.
- Different teams report risk, progress, and priorities in incompatible ways.
- Important decisions and dependencies are discussed but not visibly owned.
- Teams are working hard, yet rework, escalation, or delivery noise continues.

What you receive

Deliverable	What it gives leadership
Delivery health scorecard	A concise view across six delivery-health domains, supported by observed evidence.
Findings and evidence summary	Clear separation between facts, patterns, risks, and assumptions requiring validation.
Priority risk and dependency view	The few exposures most likely to affect outcomes, timing, cost, or confidence.
30/60/90-day action roadmap	Sequenced actions with recommended owners, decisions, and near-term outcomes.
Executive readout	A decision-oriented discussion of what matters now, what can wait, and what intervention is warranted.

Low disruption by design

One program, up to four interviews, up to eight core artifacts, a kickoff, and an executive readout over three to four weeks. The result is evidence and an action roadmap - not a generic maturity score or blame exercise.

Common questions

Is this an audit?

No. It is a focused advisory assessment designed to improve decisions and delivery. It is not a financial, legal, compliance, security, or forensic audit, and it is not a formal PMO maturity certification.

Will this disrupt the team?

The standard package limits live time to a kickoff, up to four interviews, and a final readout. Evidence review, scoring, synthesis, and report development are performed outside client meetings.

What will you need from us?

An empowered sponsor, timely access to selected stakeholders, up to eight agreed artifacts, relevant read-only views or exports, and consolidated factual corrections during the review window.

How quickly will we receive results?

Usually within three to four calendar weeks after kickoff and receipt of the required evidence. Delayed access, additional interviews, or expanded scope may change the schedule.

What kinds of programs fit?

Technology-enabled and cross-functional programs are the strongest fit, including SaaS, CRM, cloud, data, operating-model, release, and transformation work.

What if the program is already in crisis?

The Health Check can establish a baseline, but urgent recovery requiring daily involvement may need a different engagement. Silverware Resource Group will recommend the smallest responsible next step.

Do you implement the recommendations?

Implementation is not included in the assessment. A separate improvement sprint, recovery engagement, or limited advisory scope can be proposed when the findings support it.

How is the fee determined?

The Health Check is normally quoted as a fixed fee after a short discovery conversation. Scope, stakeholder volume, evidence quality, complexity, access, and urgency determine the final quote. A deposit is required to schedule the work.

Will you require access to our systems?

Not necessarily. The standard package favors client-approved exports, screenshots, and read-only evidence. Any system access and data-handling rules are defined before work begins.

What happens after the readout?

You receive the agreed deliverables and can decide whether to act internally, request a separately scoped implementation engagement, or take no further action. There is no automatic retainer.
